Keyword: Reduplication and Online Mass Media.

Researcher on reduplication is not only found in dialects Indonesian but also in English this time reduplication research in an online mass media can be found in the reduplication process in the Jakarta Post and CNN Indonesia 3 editions in 2019. Some newspapers in online mass media still use some reduplication in it so researchers are interested in researching the online mass media. The purpose of this study is to obtain a description of the equation of reduplication in Indonesian and English, to know the differences between Indonesian and English reduplication.

This research used the descriptive qualitative method with several steps Read/learn data, Learn keywords, Write down the 'model' found, Encoding. Based on the form of reduplication or repeated words in the data there are 8 full reduplication words, 2 vowel reduplication, and 2 partial reduplications. There are several similarities and differences between reduplications between English and Indonesian. In English, the reduplication method has two directions, namely left to right (LR) and right to left (RL). The point is the process of repeating words that can explain the meaning after and before the word so that the language gets a new meaning from two words that have improved the reduplication process. Furthermore, the reduplication process in English causes changes in the categories of identity and words. Even though the category is the same (noun) but the identity is different. Change word categories.

Then the reduplicdzation functions in English The researcher hopes this research can be useful to the readers can give also inspirations to do a better speech in the English language. This time we need to know generally in the word, as we know that the first international language to transfer the information in this global era is English. The foreign language is needed to study the other language to make communication with a different place.
